Between Us

Thanks to the editor for his kind expression at the end of my column last week. If my readers enjoy my column, then I am happy. With the exception of the dainties he spoke of having been sent in (which I am willing to give to him), I think I had rather keep my identity unknown—unless they come in too fast. This past week I was discussed right in my presence, and was my face registering "guilty" . . . So many newcomers here in the past few months. Statesboro is beginning to be a real city in every sense of the word. It would be impossible to name them all. Three new-comers in the younger married set that we see at the parties are Mrs. John Osterweiser, a very new bride at the Rushing Hotel; Carolyn Lanier (Mrs. Fred Thomas Jr.) and Betty Josey Smith, who really belonged to us after all. . . I don't know whether we are enjoying the parties or the chance to see so many of our lovely new homes. Mrs. Bravely entertained her club and a few extra tables and showed us her home. It is so pretty and the many little novelties around added to its attractiveness. The H. H. Cowart home next door is equally pretty. . . Reading around I see little Lane Johnston home from a lengthy stay in an Atlanta hospital, sitting in a rolling chair at the local theatre enjoying "Mickey Mouse." . . Young girls looking so pretty in Girl Scout uniforms. . . Sue Watson, attractively dressed in real spring costume at party foursome given at Cecil Kennedy's. Dress resembling apple blossom.

AROUND TOWN.
Battering Mississippi river flood waters, threatening to erase the government's billion-dollar levee system and the efforts of 150,000 men, swept steadily higher Sunday night as swollen waters of the Ohio reached their peak and swept southward.

A flood-wary nation counted 366 known dead as waters gradually receded in the upper Ohio valley. Rescue workers believed additional scores of deaths may be revealed as the flood subsides.

More than 1,000,000 were homeless. One-quarter of those were in southern states where the floods have not yet reached their peaks.

Damage was estimated at close to half a billion dollars.

The gnawing waters ate through a mud dike protecting Tiptonville, Tenn. Redfoot lake and a wide area of three West Tennessee counties.

It was not a "main line" levee break, engineers said. The waters are expected to fall back to a secondary levee.

Men directing the labors of the vast pick and shovel army against the flood were confident they could hold the crowding river within bounds. "Only the weather can beat us," they said.

Bad weather forecasters in Washington predicted rain and heavy weather in a least four of the flood states—Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The area around Tiptonville was packed with potential danger. Two thousand men, wading knee-deep in slush and mud trying to brace a dike that protected the lives of residents of Lake, Dyre and Obion counties, Tennessee.

The flood ate through sandbag reinforcements at Slough Landing neck in the Kentucky-Tennessee line and additional equipment was rushed into line.

Engineers preparing the Mississippi levee system for the greatest test watched anxiously as the Ohio flood crest reached Evansville, Ind., and slipped down stairs toward Cairo, Ill. The crest now is expected to reach Cairo—confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi—about Thursday.

The river reached a stage of 50.7 feet at Evansville and was expected to go no higher.

Cairo, a triangular island cut off on two sides by Ohio waters and on the third by the Mississippi, believed itself ready for the test this week.

Reinforcement of emergency bulwarks atop the V-shaped wall at Cairo was declared "essentially complete." The river had reached a 59.2-foot stage shortly before noon and was lapping less than a foot below the top of the concrete wall. The emergency wall of timber and cinders extended three feet higher, however, and no danger was felt that the city would be flooded.

Flood waters which burst over the Ohio's banks and cut a new channel to the Mississippi north of Cairo Friday eased pressure on the walls of the flood-bound community.

The dead, by states: Kentucky, 237; Arkansas, 41; Ohio, 21; Missouri, 17; Indiana, 12; West Virginia, 11; Illinois, 12; Tennessee, 7; Mississippi, 4; Pennsylvania, 3; and Alabama, 2.

Department of Agriculture officials estimated that 300,000,000 tons of rich topsoil had been swept from the Ohio valley and would result in permanent loss to farmers.

War Department headquarters at Washington continued their plans for removal of a possible 600,000 persons along the Mississippi despite engineers' predictions that they would hold the river within bounds.

The army had completed plans for the greatest peace-time undertaking of its kind and awaited word from the threatened lowlands before putting it into effect.

National guards in Arkansas forced some families from their homes at layover point.

Cincinnati, with damage estimated at more than $25,000,000, still suffered a water shortage.

A quarantine cut Louisville off from the world. Highways were blocked to all but necessary traffic.

A restricted road extended five miles from the city limit. Families will be barred from homes until sanitation is restored.

FLOOD DEATH TOLL HAS REACHED 366

More Than a Million Persons Made Homeless; One-Fourth in Southern States.

Battering Mississippi river flood waters, threatening to erase the government's billion-dollar levee system and the efforts of 150,000 men, swept steadily higher Sunday night as swollen waters of the Ohio reached their peak and swept southward.

A flood-wary nation counted 366 known dead as waters gradually receded in the upper Ohio valley. Rescue workers believed additional scores of deaths may be revealed as the flood subsides.

More than 1,000,000 were homeless. One-quarter of those were in southern states where the floods have not yet reached their peaks.

Damage was estimated at close to half a billion dollars.

The gnawing waters ate through a mud dike protecting Tiptonville, Tenn. Redfoot lake and a wide area of three West Tennessee counties.

It was not a "main line" levee break, engineers said. The waters are expected to fall back to a secondary levee.

Men directing the labors of the vast pick and shovel army against the flood were confident they could hold the crowding river within bounds. "Only the weather can beat us," they said.

Bad weather forecasters in Washington predicted rain and heavy weather in a least four of the flood states—Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The area around Tiptonville was packed with potential danger. Two thousand men, wading knee-deep in slush and mud trying to brace a dike that protected the lives of residents of Lake, Dyre and Obion counties, Tennessee.

The flood ate through sandbag reinforcements at Slough Landing neck in the Kentucky-Tennessee line and additional equipment was rushed into line.

Engineers preparing the Mississippi levee system for the greatest test watched anxiously as

Between Us

We're wondering which is always the freshest looking at the Georgia Theatre, Julia Sudath or the flowers sent there each week by a local florist. Keep them in the window with you, Julia. We've heard and read so much about the flood I just wonder if you have thought what you would do if you were told to vacate. We were discussing that subject at Mrs. Tyson's lovely party and someone said, "I would grab 'Gone With the Wind' and run." Some one told me of a very interesting fine arts committee meeting of the Woman's Club with A. K. Lanier and "Honey" Bowen as hostesses. They were discussing books they had read recently, and Marion Johnston and Eunice Lester had just read "How to Improve Your Conversation." I was thinking how we all needed to read it. Monday night when the out-of-town Broadway came over to present the character to the local club, at the last minute the local members found the wives of the visitors were coming. Thanks to the ever-obliging wives, they hurriedly dressed and were the perfect hostesses. Grown ups as well as children enjoyed the "Beach Nut circus." Rita Booth Johnston, over from Swainsboro borrowed a chair from the drug store so she could see it in a big way. Attractive youngsters of Almarita and Gibson. I am sure you have noticed the lovely fresh flowers in local grocery stores, they seem to say, "Good morning," particularly the daffodils. High School's prettiest girl (my vote) receiving a beautiful pair of riding boots from admirer on her birthday last week. Evelyn and Harold Shuprine over from Swainsboro on Sunday. Little Jackie McClung moving to Waynesboro to the regret of many of her adult friends. Forty quail served at dinner given for the McClungs by Grace and "Slim" Waller at Cecil Kennedy's. Wonder how many of you heard the celebrated pianist Frederic at the college Tuesday night? I felt after hearing him as Beattie wrote, "Is there a heart that music cannot melt? Alas! how is that rugged heart for which I forget the Red Cross is counting on YOU; be sure to give them your help. Be on the watch and you may see me AROUND TOWN."
